Education Minister expects bust-up within the government frontline NHS workers have been told they will soon receive the Oxford/AstraZeneca vaccine as regulators approve the coronavirus treatment this week. The Medicines and Healthcare Products Regulatory Agency (MHRA) could give the go-ahead for the UK vaccine as early as Monday, a decision that would speed up the introduction of vaccinations in the UK. Although there were concerns that the Oxford jab may not be as effective as the Pfizer version, AstraZeneca said it should release new data showing that its effectiveness is now around 95 percent. The Oxford Jab is about ten times cheaper than the Pfizer vaccine and much easier to distribute because it only needs to be stored under normal freezing conditions. The Oxford vaccine will be rolled out across the country from 4 January under plans by ministers. The Telegraph can reveal. The government wants two million people to receive their first dose of either the Oxford vaccine or the Pfizer jab within a fortnight, and that will significantly turn the vaccination program upside down. The Telegraph can also reveal that mass vaccination centres in sports stadiums and conference venues will be launched in the second week of January, provided the regulator approves the Oxford-AstraZeneca vaccine within days. The introduction of the Oxford vaccine, which is easier to store and handle than the Pfizer jab and costs less, should make it easier to reach people living in the most remote areas of England. The government has ordered 100 million jabs and 40 million by March next year. Senior government sources said the approval could come as early as Sunday after the company data tranche on Monday evening to the Medicines and Healthcare Products Regulator (MHRA). I was just ignored. But I will not accept it any more. I will not be treated that way. That has gone too far. They should not do this to people. I am taking legal action. The papers were filed for a court and the trial has now begun. Hollywood said he thought he was paid less than his co-stars for the spin-off show All Round To Mrs Brown's.
